Although at least ten pounds heavier, Frank Erne of Buffalo was fairly outpointed by George Dixon, the champion feather weight of the world, who received Referee Dick Roche's decision after the twenty-fifth round at the Broadway A. C. last night. Erne weighed in at noon and was 84 pounds overweight, although he has never had any trouble in getting down to the required limit of 122 pounds. Dixon, in spite of this handlesp, consented to meet the Buffalo pugilist, and from the very first round the champion showed that he had trained faithfully and had not "gone back" so much as the sports believed. Dixon's tactics were different from those employed in former battles. He did not rush in with the well-known left drive for the body and right awing for the fashion. He did the bulk of the leading, and so an easy task in making a decision.

encounter with the plucky little champion. He seemed to be averse to making leads, and on many occasions when Dixon stood sparring at long range, recuperating from his own efforts, Erno remained strictly on the defensive, much to the surprise of the spectators.

In fact Erne's tactics, coupled with the careful and cautious work of Dixon, made the bout anything but exciting. There was plenty of real science displayed, but there was never an instant when either pugilist was in trouble. Not a single drop of blood was spilled, and beyond a few slight bruises around the eyes the boys had Erne had prepared himself for rushing tactics on the part of Dixon, and as the latter was cute enough to adopt other methods, he succeeded in puzziing the Buffalonian until the last few rounds, when Erne woke up and showed that he was not stale or afraid. But Dixon was justly mtitled to the verdict, and the crowd, which was the largest on record at the club, expressed satisfaction by great cheering when the announcement was made.

Before the first bout was put on it was noised about the club house that when Dixon and Erns weighed in at noon, the latter was over weight.

weighed in at noon, the latter was over weight. When Tom O'Rourke was asked about the matter by The Sun reporter, he said:

"The men were supposed to weigh 122 pounds at 12 o'clock. Dixon was all right when he got on the scales, but Erne weighed 1304, pounds. The latter had pleuty of time to get down to the limit; but a week ago he wrote a letter to one of the Buffalo papers that it was his intention to be over weight, and that he would knock Dixon out. At 11st it was my resolve to declare the match off, but Dixon refused to consont. Erne agreed to lorfeit $500 for being over weight, and that seemed satisfactory to George. "By the time they enter the ring to night Erne will probably weigh 135 pounds. It looks to me like a case of win at all hazards on the part of Erne. Dixon, two weeks ago, weighed only 111 pounds, and while training he fainted away. We look him from Coney Island to Fenhurst, L. I., where he got up to 117 pesterday. He did no work at all aiter that and was a trille under 122 when he got on the scales to-lay."

Erne admitted that he was over weight, but did not attempt to give any excuse. He did not attempt to give any excuse. He did not attempt to give any excuse. He did not eny that the match was made at 122 pounds, however. Later on O'Rourke received advice from any number of sporting men not to allow Dixon to meet Erne under such unequal conditions, and Tom began to think seriously about the But Dixon wouldn't listen to suggestions and said:

it. But Dixon wouldn't listen to suggestions and said:

"I'll meet this man if he weighs a ton!"

Spike Sunivan of Boston offered to go on instead of Dixon, winner take all, and promised to give half the money to George if he (Sullivan) deleated the Buffaio man. Dixon, however, turned a deaf ear, and also declined to let Kid McPartland take a chance at Erne in his place.

There was evidence of a great crowd as early as 7:30 o'clock when Broadway, in front of the club house, was thronged. The prevaiing prices, $3. $5, $6, and $7, did not appear to deter people from buying their tickets early and rushing through the turnstiles. As a result there was one of the biggest attendances since the club was first opened.

one of the biggest attendances since the club was first opened.

At the very least 4,000 persons were around the sides of the building and there wasn't even standing room for the late comers. At the outset the betting was 5 to 4 on Dixon, but when it was learned that Erne would have such an advantage even money prevailed on all sides.

This was the third meeting between Erne and the feather weight champion. When they boxed twenty rounds several months ago in this club both weighed 122 pounds, and Erne received a decision which did not meet with universal appgoval. Since that time Dixon had trained so faithfully that he showed unfaulted improvement in his battles with "Australian Billy" Murphy and Jack Downey of Brooklyn. Erne, on the other hand, met signal deteat at the hands of Martin Fisherty in the New York A. C. a month ago, which was in the nature of a general surprise. Dick Roche, as usual, acted as referee.

George Byers of Boston and Lon Beckwith of Cleveland put up the preliminary bout, twelve rounds at 150 pounds. They were big, athletic-looking colored men, and they showed heavy hitting qualities from the first tap of the rong. Both landed heavy swings on the neck while industing in huricane fighting in the second round, but beyond a little staggering on the part of Beckwith. Both and a little staggering on the part of Beckwith, no damage was done. Beckwith forced the fighting in the third round. Byers countering heavily on every lead. In the fourth Beckwith again cut the pace until Hyers mixed it up and landed left and right swings on the jaw. George followed this up with a couple of straight lefts and then a storm or terrific swings that finally sent Beckwith down. Before the latter could get up inside the limit the bell ended the round. Byers rushed in the fifth and soon had Beckwith reeing around the ring. Byers rained left and right hand swings on the Jaw until Beckwith fell, bleed,ng from the nose and mouth. He got up, though, and mixed it up so gamely that a chance swing on the Jaw anocked Byers down. The latter was very strong, though, and jumping up quickly, he rushed the Cleveland puglist to a corner, where he nailed Beckwith on the jaw three times, the latter falling in a heap. Still Beckwith managed to stagger to his feet, whereupon Byers put in a couple more mashes that made Lon so helpless that the referee ended the go and declared Byers the winner.

Dixon entered the ring first at 9:25 o'clock. His seconds were Tom O'Rourke, Joe Elms, and Charley Miner. O'Rourke took occasion to say to the crowd that Erne was over weight, but that the battle would go on just the same. He also declared all bets off, which created no end of discussion. f discussion. Referee Roche also said that all bets were off Referee Roche also said that all bets were off unless those who knew the weights beforehand wanted to hold their wagers. Erne came into the ring ten minutes after his opponent. He was attended by Jinnuy Carroll, Frank Zimpher, Sammy Calinhan, ann "Slip" Krieger. The men shook hands at 9:40 o'clock, They were matched to go twenty-live rounds. matched to go twenty-live rounds. Soily Smith announced that he would like to meet the winner at 122 pounds.

First Round—When the men squared off it was easy to see that Erne was the bigger man, although live seemed to be in time trim. They opened with light sparring, Dixon keeping away for at least a mining the state of the face. The Dixon led first winner high test on the face, the countries on the right extended for the wind. Fur anounced again with a left hander for the wind, Erne and around the ring like marionettes, neither making a lead until the best rang. Second Round—Dixon's let was blocked, and Erne then put a left to the face. It was blocked, and Erne then put a left to the face, the was foreign and clinching. They exchanged swings at city a moment and Dixon rusined in with a couble swing, following it with a right on the eye which made frank for a moment and Dixon rusined in with a couble swing, following it with a right on the eye which made frank for the state of the countries.

Thing Rousd—Dixon's tactick were not those that he had used in previous battles. He was more careful. When he came up, though he saw an opening for a leit swing and it landed on the jast. They indulged in a lit of infighting and both used free nands in a clinch. Dixon stayed away for few seconds and then put a hard leit on the nose Erne anadia in a clinch. Dixon stayed away for few seconds and missed a right swing in the landed a heavy left on the mose again just as time was up. Foreign Round—The first minute was devoted to light sparring, after which Dixon so this left to the face. Erne stopped another left and put a jab onto the right eye. Both landed swings in a short raily and Dixon, after keeping off, rain in with a swing on the lead, at the same time receiving a stiff counter the mose again just as sting was not leading and teating the leads and missed a right with a swing on the lead, at the same time receiving a stiff counter to the lead, at the same time receiving a stiff counter to the lead, at the same time re

First Rouse.—Dixon shot a loft to the neck and firse cliniched. George came again with a swing on the side of the head, and Erne drove in a couple of justs on the face. Dixon once more rushed in with a right on the eye, which made it purt a first. Dixon, after a livel fidding, rushed in again with a couple of swings. Frac count ring strongly each time, and then the fact and the surface to the face of the strongly each time, and then the fact on the best face, both of which were hard blows. They were sperring at the bell.

Sixin Rouse.—Stree showed no desire to do the leading, so Dixon opened with a lett on the nose, tearing tried a left for the stomach, but Frank got away quickly. Dixon swang a left to the neck, and also put the same glove squarely on the nose. Erne being contented with countrys on the body. Dixon made put a sharp jate on the nose and swang a right to the neck, Krne's left reaching the eye. Dixon wound up the round with a right on the body. It was the champon's round.

Stater Rouse.—Erne was still on the defensive.

If the dust follow it up, however, and Dixon put a read right over the heart. George has swung his right over the heart. George has swung his thoulder, and Erne planked a tranget one on the champion's mouth. Honors about even the humbous got a hard left to the ribs. George tried another left for the etomach, Erne backing away just in lime. Frank sent a left to the cheek, and Dixon swung a sharp drive to the left eye. Frank met a rush with a good left on the mouth, Dixon, however, hammering the stomach with his right. Erne received another stomach punch, and both sent in hard swings on the head a second before the gong clanged.

Extravit Rouxo.—They were very fresh when they came up. Erne stopped a couple of lefts, and sent in a jab on the need so Dixon swung a right for the head. Dixon then began sparring at long range, but Erne didn't force matters and the crowd began to chirp. George finally ran in with a couple of drives on the head, and the Buffalo boy retreated. George followed him closely, but no more blows were struck during the remainder of the round.

Twanter Rouxo.—Dixon's left was blocked off, but George came in again with a couple of right over the heart just as George was getting away. Dixon then resorted to sparring, after which he ran in with a body blow and Erne swung both hands to the head. It was still evident that Erne was playing a waiting game, which made the swungs, but George got his right to the stomach. George piled right in with half a dozen hard swings, Erne meeting him with left jabs and right-hand counters. George continued his attack until he almost doubled up the Buffalo man with a terrific right-hand punch in the stomach. George did some more rushi Firtexixii Round.—Dixon led with a left on the nose. Then he fiddled a bit until Erne consented to lead with a corking left on the jaw. Both landed straight jabs, and Erne ran in with a double swing, which did no harm. Erne led again with a left on the face. Dixon countering on the neck and clinching. Erne's heavy left was stopped, and both got into a raily of infighting at the close. Erne's round.

Sixteent Bound.—Erne opened with a left on the face and blocked off a double swing for the bead. Dixon swing a left on the jaw and put in a body punch that brought a clinch. George was doing the leading now, although he tried very little rushing. Erne finally met him with a hard right on the short rits, and drove in smother in the same place that Frue finally met him with a hard right on the short ribs, and drove in another in the same place that turned Dixon around. The last was the best blow landed by Erne since the fight began.

SEVENTRINTH HOUND—Erne was gradually letting himself out, but at that he waited for Dixon's lead. Both landed swings on the head, and a few seconds later Dixon's letteys began to puff. For fully twenty-five seconds they sparred, and then got into a raily at close quarters, both landing about an equal number of punches. Dixon finally put in a heavy left on the jaw, and when he followed it up Erne clinched. More light sparring ended the round.

Eightrasynt Round—Dixon's rush was met by a clinch. Both landed lefts on the head, and Erne stopped two hard drives. George put in a heavy right on the beart, but Erne continued to stop George's swings for the jaw. Erne once lost his baiance, but he recovered his feet before the champion could reach him. Then they sparred and daiced around the ring until the sound of the gong sent them to their corners. Dixon's reand, as Erne had resumed defensive tactics.

NINETERSYN ROUND—Dixon's left got through Erne's guard and landed on the jaw. He went in again with his famous double swing. Erne meeting him with left and right. George swung a right to the back of the neck and then aparred at long range while Erne never made a move at him. George finally sprang forward with a couple of lefts, and they serve in the act of exchanging heavy swings when the round ended in Dixon's favor.

When the men sat down the big crowd arose, and shouts of "Dixon! Dixon!" could be heard above the din. The referce did not hesitate a minute in making his rulling, and whon the colored boy was named as the victor there was an ovation and a big floral horseshoe in store for him. Dixon went over and shook hands with Erne, who took his defeat manfully by heartily congrantating the channing. heartily congratulating the champion

Billy Delancy Says It Was Because Jim Would

San Francisco, March 24.-In an interview last night Billy Delaney, Corbett's trainer at Carson, said that Jim lost the fight because he would not take his advice. He said that Corbett worked altogether too hard the last few days before the fight, merely to show off before a lo of Eastern sports; that he played too much handball; that he refused to drink anything when he needed a little mait to supply the drain on his system; that he trained to a feather edge, leaving not an ounce of surplus flesh on his bones, and that he talked with people in his cor-ner during the fight instead of recovering his breath.

Delancy said during the last three days preceding the fight Fitzsimmons did very little work, spending most of his time driving about with Mrs. Fitzsimmons, while Corbett on these days gave exhausting exhibitions of his strength, still was a supply the strength of the strength and are in the strength. skill and agility, which greatly delighted his friends, but sapped his vitality sadly. All of this, Delaney said, was against his advice and in line with the advice given him by one of his other trainers. This advice, Delaney claims, cost Corbett the championship.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Cycle Board of Trade was held yesterday at their office, 271 Broadway. There were present A. L. Garford, C. W. Dickerson, Kirk Brown, R. S. Crawford, G. H. Day, C. S. Dikeman, C. H. Funnell, W. Measure, A. R. Peck, Albert G. Spalding, J. M. Wainwright, and J. L. Yost. The accounts of the Chicago and New York cycle shows were gone over and considerable business of a trade character discussed. The question as to whether the board will hold any national shows in the future did not come up. After transacting a volume of routine business the meeting was adjourned late yesterday to convene again to-day, when business of a new character, having a bearing on this year's bicycle trade, will be acted upon.

Wheelmen throughout the Metropolitan

Wheelmen throughout the Metropolitan district are unanimous in approving of the idea of holding a road race on the Riverside Drive late in May or early in June. Talks with prominent riders yesterday developed that the project of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New York will secure strong support.

An old-time reading man, in talking of the plan of the race, suggests that there is a great element of danger in such a contest. He states that the turn at Claremont, the end of the projected course, is right over a steep precipice, and for riders to take this turn at racing speed, unless some provision is made for the safety of the compatitors, means that a large number will take unexpected coasts down the embankment. Again, it is argued that the incline on the hills on the Drive will require the utmost caution on the part of racing men desirous of avoiding spills. To hold the race properly it will be necessary to rope off the entire course, as an enormous crowd would be likely to attend.

any to robe an enterior course, as an enormous crowd would be likely to attend.

Notes.

The Century Wheelmen of this city will hold their annual meeting on next Monday night, when how officers will be elected.

The bicycle clubs in the Metropolitan district are arranging to hold runs to Philadelphia in August to attend the national meet of the L. A. W.

The annual election of officers of the Hadson County Wheelmen will be held on April 2.

The Central Wheelmen of Recoklyn intend to take an active interest in cycling matters this season. Club runs have been arranged as follows: March 28, Coney Island; April 11, Riverside Park; 26, Freeport; May 2, Passale Falls; 28, Youkers.

In the contest among the members of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club for the club mileage medal, Fred Allart leads with over 2, 600 miles to his credit.

The Century Wheelmen have decided that in the event of rain on Sunday, April 26, their spring century run will be postponed until May 2.

Lasi season the Century Wheelmen of Philadelphia brought 167 men through on their annual century run. The Fairhill Wheelmen of the same city will hold a 100-mile run on May 9, and offer a prize valued at 5100 to the club beating the Century Club record.

The Canadian Wheelmen's Association has decided to apply to the International Cyclist's Association for the award of the world's champlonship races to Canadian Island. A tea-mile open landicap road race will be held by the Dedham Cycle Club on April 19.

A bicycle division has been formed in the Young Mee's Champions, Fresident, H. C. Condit; Vice-Prosident, F. I. Morrow: Secretary, George W. Mill; Treasurer, Chauncey Griswold; Captain, C. A. Hathburn, Licutenants, C. Stoddarf and H. S. Brant.

The Tamaqua Wheelmen are arranging to hold an open century run in May.
